Transformation Of Calisher's Store

Temporary Quarters Are Remodeled.

The transformation of Stanton street from a rendezvous of dray wagons and fruit stands to a business street, is being accomplished so rapidly that men about town who are on the streets each day can hardly recognize the new business thoroughfare as being the same.

To the J. Calisher Drygoods company is due the credit for this transformation. Starting with the announcement that the Calisher company would erect a five story, concrete department store on the corner of Stanton and Texas streets, the reality prices were at once increased. When the same company lost its old home by the Buckler building fire, the E. B. Welch building on Stanton street was leased as temporary quarters. Then began the real transformation. From a fire blackened building, with nothing but gaudy red fire sale banners for decorations, the Welch building has been made over into a modern department store with soft carpeted stairways, also after a fire of women's ready to wear garments, millinery, silk and dress goods, etc., etc., on the three floors of the new store.

As an outward sign of what is within the J. Calisher company's show windows on Stanton street, which formerly were filled with fire damaged furniture, now offer a series of panoramic panels, an attractive showing of imported gowns and hats and beautiful evening wraps and filmy laces. Against a background of white chignon over pink the Calisher decorator has arranged an autumnal display which is most extraordinary. Autumn leaves in variegated colors are grouped with chrysanthemums and poppies in clusters around candelabra of soft shaded lights which give a soft, mellow glow to the windows when the evening shadows fall.

A beautiful gown of black and white occupies the center panel surrounded by broad brimmed evening hats of black, white and the brighter colors, while afternoon and evening gowns are arranged with the most careful attention to display details which gives the window an attractive appearance. Arc lights are to be swung over the sidewalk in front of the Calisher windows in order that the crowds during the fair and holiday season may better inspect the offerings of the big department store in the evenings when the streets are filled with shoppers.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE CRAWFORD THEATER.

Manager Rich announces that the Glass-Gagnon Stock company will open their second week starting with the matinee Sunday at 2:30 with the big comedy success, "The Man on the Box." This, says manager Rich, is the same great comedy that was seen here with Max Pigman, in the leading role at $2 prices, and manager Rich says he will guarantee as good a production of this great bill as was ever seen in this city and at popular prices. If you expect to go Sunday to get seats now, he says, and the sale is big and the house will be sold out long before opening time. Prices 15, 25 and 35 cents.

THE MAJESTIC.

Manager Rich says Monday will witness the return of the original Majestic company with all the old favorites, including Fritz Fields, Wentworth and Burns, Lenore Lohr, Genevieve Delacour, Mildred Manning, Evelyn Conways, as the sale is big and the house with Fritz Fields' new comedy, "The Town on the Back of the Map."

NEGRO WAITERS AT TOLTEC
ENGAGE IN CUTTING SCRAP
C. C. (Cap) Burris, a negro, is held at the police station on a charge of assault to murder as a result of a cutting scrape Friday night at the Toltce club, in which W. N. Smith, another negro, was slashed across the neck.

The affair occurred in the kitchen of the Toltce club at 1 a. m. as the guests of the opening reception were leaving. Very few, however, learned of it.
Burris was arrested Friday night, but was released. Saturday noon he appeared at the police station and surrendered, stating C. A. Beers, of the Toltce club, had induced him to come. Burris denied complicity in the affair, stating he was going down the stairs leading to the kitchen, when a glass and plate whizzed past his head. Going back to the top of the stairs, he says, he was arrested. Smith is a patient at Hotel Dien and is said to be in a serious condition.
